

Peter Harbison
Executive Chairman
Centre for Asia Pacific Aviation (CAPA)

Peter Harbison is Executive Chairman of the Centre for Asia Pacific Aviation (CAPA). He is a prominent commentator on Asia Pacific aviation affairs. The Centre produces industry research and analysis, along with numerous newsletters.

Peter's career in aviation comprises more than 30 years, with extensive experience in government regulation, airport management and privatisation, and airline startup and strategy.

He has conducted more than 200 consultancy projects either as project manager or senior advisor, from the Middle East, India, China and most parts of Asia to the South Pacific.

Peter is a former Chairman of the International Air Transport Association's World Aviation Regulation Monitoring Group, an international expert body which reviewed bilateral, multilateral and regulatory developments and reports annually.

He is a board member of the Australian Aviation Council, immediate past President of the Aviation Law Association of Australia and New Zealand, a former IATA Travel Agency Commissioner and a former member of the NSW Government Steering Committee examining deregulation of NSW air services.

Peter is a law graduate of Melbourne and London Universities and holds a Masters in Law from McGill University.
